SILVER CONGRESS

Metallic Tongued Orator in Discourse

FREE COINAGE IS APPROVED

Resolutions in Its Favor are Almost Unanimous Eastern Delegates Join with the Foreigners and Colorado Follows the Procession

DENVER Nov 21 The time appointed for the opening of the mining congress this morning was 10 o'clock but it was 10 before Chairman Stewart had his gavel raising the meeting to order Even then there were but half of the delegates present The labors of the last two days have tired even the delegates and little enthusiasm was manifested at the opening

The committee on resolutions were directed to appoint Senator Tabor Judge Goodwin J W Donaldson and J H Kimball had carefully revised the report of the committee and eliminated those of all typographical errors

R C Powers of Arizona an avowed advocate of free coinage occupied an hour in a speech on the use of silver from the earliest days of the world's history to the present time

E B Brown of Aspen was called to the platform and spoke as follows I have examined the figures and statistics of the last year and America should declare the parity of the metals Why should the United States consult with Britain? Why should they ask Belgium what to do? Let gold be demonetized and it will be worth very little silver was demonetized and it is worth less to-day And if I mistake the United States can maintain any position she may take on the silver question It is the old country that uses our money and do we owe money to? Last year we paid out millions to foreign countries Is there a nation that would have spent among them and not take our silver? Does Canada produce anything that the United States does not produce? We produce great quantities of silver We are rich That being a fact why can't the United States take a position and continue to maintain it? Last year the balance of trade was $68 000,000 in our favor When you analyze the thing you can readily see why gold comes to us and never goes away The imports to the United States have only amounted to $2 000 000. Are they sending silver to us? They have not to send

At this juncture Senator Stewart arose and announced that he did not own a share of Comstock stock thus refuting an old allegation

Judge Harley of Colorado followed the stage and spoke for twenty minutes favor of free coinage

Hon Martin Maginnis of Montana was loudly called for He was enthusiastically cheered when he arose and loud calls were made for him to take the stage, but he refused, saying that he preferred to speak from his seat. He spoke eloquently for fifteen minutes. He denounced Campbell of Ohio in a scathing manner for his cowardice in not advocating a platform upon which he was nominated. "The question of free coinage is above all other questions and one of the next may be compelled to vote against our party nominees." He was in congress for a good many years and there saw the fierce fights between representatives of different localities for local superiority and influence. It is a pretty good patriotism that will prompt a man to stand by his own section. At the conclusion of Mr Maginnis' speech he was enthusiastically cheered, amounting almost to an ovation.

Congressman G. A. Cassiday, of Nevada was called for. Upon ascending the stage he disclaimed any intention of delivering a speech, saying that it by devolved upon Senator Stewart, who had agreed to do all the talking, if he (Cassiday) would do the work He nevertheless launched forth into a short speech which proved to be one of the best of the congress. He declared that every man woman and child in Nevada were united in favor of free and unlimited coinage The platform of the Nevada people is "free and unlimited coinage, or nothing" Mr Cassiday advocated the forming of the politicians to make it the dominant issue in the next campaign

AFTERNOON SESSION

T C Howell of California was the first speaker of the afternoon He made a speech of short duration in which he stated that he wished to place his state on record as in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of silver

Ex Donaphan of Missouri was loudly called for by the delegates, and during his remarks set forth in eloquent terms the benefit to be derived from the free and unlimited coinage of the white metal

Dennis Sheedy, of Colorado, spoke in favor of free coinage

Judge Goodwin, of Utah, was called to the stage and spoke as follows Mr Chairman, you have been presiding over conventions for many years and I am astonished that you have not changed the order of things. You should not call on the senators, generals and other men and then call on us small fry for rewards. When we met here last June it was the situation every one expected congress would go into session for the last eight or ten years they have promised us a free coinage law and come out in the spring with nothing. For me, personally I would just as soon have today have coinage for the United States product as coinage for the world's product I noticed a year ago when the price of silver jumped from 80 cents to $1 21 If the government were to coin legal tender the price of the metal would pay for it. Every one of the lenders who sent money from the east asked specific contract to be paid in gold I believe the lower house of congress will pass a free coinage bill this winter on this with the hope of the president vetoing it I thought that when the congress met and they saw that a year ago the wealth of the country increased and the price of silver increased, I thought they would see the wisdom of the passage of a free coinage There are 8,000 000 farmers in the United States Suppose they all spent $10 at Christmas don't you suppose all that money would have its way back to New York in two weeks? That shows where the money goes When I hear a man say that it is an American product Great Britain will swallow us up I don't believe that believe the thing to do is to press free coinage until congress is compelled to listen to the voice of public opinion The remonetization of silver is giving impetus to the metals of the world and keep up the missionary efforts.

Ex Governor Thomas moved that the resolutions be adopted by acclamation but Senator Stewart before the question was put said: "The time for action has come I am anxious that the voice of the people be heard He paid a very compliment to Senators Teller and Jones

The hour of 10 o'clock had arrived and the Chairman was about to put the previous question when Allison Little of Maine was called upon to speak upon silver. He made a short speech refusing to take the time of the convention He came to learn and not to teach. He was not convinced from what he had heard in the congress that the free and unlimited coinage of silver was right

The Connecticut delegates objected to the adoption of the resolution by acclamation but the motion was then called with the following result For the free and unlimited coinage of silver bullion [illegible] When the state of Connecticut was reached a great enthusiasm was manifested by the delegate from that state arising and saying it is that Connecticut [illegible] the centennial year for the result in the most intense enthusiasm [illegible] The delegates arose and for fully three minutes pandemonium reigned

When the vote of Canada and Russia was announced in favor of the resolution there was another scene of confusion When the total vote was declared the vote stood [illegible] in favor of the resolution [illegible] minutes before order was restored

A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered the New York Evening Telegram for its stand towards immediate publication of the silver question A telegram was sent to A J Warner of Ohio and the executive committee appointed at the St Louis national silver convention [illegible] ranking minority of the house of representatives of silver A resolution was passed [illegible] congress pass a law protecting [illegible] and to prevent the domination of the silver streams A resolution was also passed asking congress to protect the forests of the mountains and to encourage the cultivation of [illegible]

Salt Lake City Utah Deadwood S D and Cleveland O were candidates for the place of holding the next meeting The latter was decided by the selection of Hon M A M [illegible] congressman after passing resolutions of thanks adjourned sine die

Another Drilling Contest

DENVER Nov Nov 20—The drill committee of the mining exchange determined that none of the contestants in the regular tournament that was concluded last night shall leave the city dissatisfied So much comment has been made upon the palpably different hardness of the stones upon which the [illegible] worked that a chance to try [illegible] evening will be afforded A meeting of the committee was held this morning and it was decided to offer three prizes of $200, $100 and $100, $200 in all to be contested for by all the teams that made a record of 21 inches and over This gave nine entries and Hess Reagan and Page Butte City Abern and Rinker, Lake county Linquist and Fanner San Juan county Mullin and Oats, Gilpin county Harrington and Munn Pitkin county O Keefe and Dwyer Lake county Short and Manuel Gilpin county; McCarthy and O'Connell, Hinsdale county Yates Bros, Boulder county The only change made in the teams as they appeared previously is in the crack one of Lake John Abron takes the place of Kennedy and will drill with Rinker In order that no possible chance can be found for a kick, a new stone was secured upon which all the teams will operate Should there by any chance be harder or softer cracks the contestants must attribute the striking of them solely to their luck

In many respects the evening struggle was more exciting than those of Wednesday and Thursday nights. It is claimed that more money was wagered than was placed on the regular contest The score made by O'Keefe and Dwyer in the hard rock last night afforded great encouragement and the substitution of Abern for Kennedy caused a feeling that Lake was herself again When time was called to-night Regan and Page were compelled to withdraw from the contest because of a severe cold contracted by Regan

The results of the contest were as follows Abern and Rinker, Lake, 31¾, Linquist and Tanner, Silverton, 27¼, Mullin and Oats, Gilpin 27¼, O Keefe and Dwyer Lake 26¾; Short and [illegible] Gilpin 25 McCarthy and O'Connell, Hinsdale 27¼ Cummings & Hall, Ouray, 23¾, Ferguson and McLeod, Clear Creek, 25.

Advices received here from Montana force shadow a warm reception for the drilling team on their return home. A purse of several thousand dollars has been raised and will be presented the victors.

A dispatch from Helena states that $1-600 has been raised and will be offered for the best double team in the next contest

EXPERIMENTS WITH FERTILIZERS

What Government Stations Are Doing for the Farmers of the Country

[illegible] dollars annually for [illegible] fertilizers In this country [illegible] they have become [illegible] reliance on [illegible] but [illegible] them profitably [illegible] they also [illegible] potash for [illegible] The fingers of [illegible] use of [illegible] The [illegible] farmers [illegible]

[illegible] farmers must find out [illegible] and at the same time get [illegible] The prices of [illegible] differ [illegible] which are [illegible] by the stations and [illegible] by the farmers on their own farms Of course many of the experiments are [illegible] practical men [illegible] this work have degree [illegible] learned a great deal [illegible] practically [illegible] highly [illegible]

The results of these tests in general [illegible] differ [illegible] are deficient in different [illegible] to learn what [illegible] are [illegible] can be by observation and experiment [illegible] what ingredients of plant food [illegible] fails to furnish in abundance and how these unfurnished materials can be most economically supplied is to put the quest on to the soil with different fertilizing materials and get the [illegible] in the crops produced The chief use of fertilizers is to [illegible] plant food. It is [illegible] to make [illegible] of the [illegible] resources of the soil and of the materials produced on the farm and to depend upon artificial fertilizers only to furnish what is needed It is not good economy to pay high prices for materials which the soil itself may yield but it is good economy to supply the lacking ones in the cheapest way

Probably the most valuable practical work that these experiment stations have done has been to analyze these various commercial fertilizers which are offered for sale by manufacturers. In some of the states, in New Jersey for instance the fertilizers are analyzed and the qualities of chemicals found in each sample compared with what the manufacturer claimed that the composition contained So as to make this perfectly plain, the money value of the chemicals found in each sample is noted and compared with the price charged by the manufacturer Some startling results have been shown One fertilizer selling say, at twenty five dollars per ton, would be found to have a value of twenty eight, another, selling at forty dollars a ton would be found to be worth only fifteen dollars and in one instance I recall the manufacturer charged forty three dollars a ton for his complete fertilizer, and the chemist found that its actual value was only $2 50

Bulletins like these have certainly done great good, for they have warned farmers from buying inferior chemicals, and they have compelled manufacturers to keep their compositions up to the advertised standard When there is more universal education among the farmers it will only be necessary to expose the values of fertilizers in each town We have the authority of the United States agricultural department that in the states where experiment stations have long been established the greater number of the farmers now need nothing more than these chemical tests to guide them in selecting the special fertilizers needed in given cases. Doctoring the Wild Animals.

Hospitals for cats and dogs are quite common in the large cities and many a feline and canine pet has been successfully nursed through a severe illness by the expert doctors who spend their time in studying animal diseases With the exception of wounds and injuries, the great majority of the complaints which the pets suffer from come as a direct result of too high living Sweets, cake, candy and highly seasoned food will in the course of time make even the dumb brutes sick, and the animal doctors frequently find that all their patients need are a little physic and plain living. Two weeks of Sixth common treatment generally restores the pets to health and strength again

But of late years the importations to this country of wild animals for circuses, menageries and exhibitions of various kinds have [illegible] than the [illegible] sprung up a regular system of doctoring for wild animals. Their complaints generally are very few At first they are homesick after leaving their forest jungles and they pine away in their cages unless they are carefully watched. The wilder and fiercer ones refuse to be consoled, and they often injure themselves in their frantic efforts to break through their iron cage. Then the heat, change of climate and food and occasionally old age, bring on complaints that must be checked by expert physicians.—New York Epoch

Afraid of Becoming Famous.

A manuscript reader for a leading magazine says "The magazine with which I am connected employed a well known female writer to write up an interesting phase of life six years ago for which she was to receive a stipulated sum of money When her article was submitted the editor didn't like it and sent it back, but she fired it back again, demanding pay, and got it The article was pigeonholed, and no one the wiser of it again until a short time ago, when the editor resurrected it and had it put in type, forgetting all about its origin. It appeared in a recent number of the magazine and was discussed by literary people as being one of the best written articles published by the magazine in question The editor of another magazine was attracted by the article and wrote to the lady asking her to submit matter to him. The writer appears to be a very spirited young woman, however and refused to do so saying that one experience with a magazine editor is enough She says she will never write for them again If she did she might become famous She confines her efforts to newspaper work."—New York Cor St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Wonderful Gold Mine

One of the wonders of Australia and one of the greatest natural curiosities in the world, is the Mount Morgan gold mine in Queensland The precious metal contained in this mine which has paid a dividend of not less than $6 000 000 in a year, was deposited in a hot spring

Mount Morgan is a hill about 500 feet high containing at its top a cap shaped deposit made by the hot spring which once gushed out there and in this deposit the gold exists Truly a cap of Crœsus! Through untold ages the waters dropped their glittering burden and now man [illegible] the wealth of the world

Specimens of the ore from this strange mine have been sent to the United States, that they might be compared with the deposits of the great lots of rings in our own Yellowstone park It was but natural to suppose that the Yellowstone springs had also a golden treasure in their cups, but the most careful search by geologists has thus far failed to detect any trace of it.—Youth's Companion

How a Bird Gets Light

The baya bird of India spends his nights catching fireflies, with which he plasters his nest The baya does not kill the fly, but simply attaches it to his nest by means of a piece of moist clay On a dark night a baya's nest has the appearance of an electric street lamp.—St Louis Republic.

H. A. TISDALE,
Manager of the GAZETTE

We print this morning the annual report of the secretary of war. It is a document which has more than the usual interest that attaches to this kind of reports. The part which is probably of most general interest is that concerning the coast defenses. Americans are now pretty well aroused to the dilapidated state of our forts and the unprotected condition of our ports and harbors. It is therefore with much satisfaction that the public will read of the progress that has been made in the past year in this most important department of the government. Another interesting part of the report is that which concerns the enlistment of Indians. This experiment has attracted much attention throughout the country and especially among those who have not believed that an Indian was only good when dead. The complete success of the trial as attested by the secretary is not only pleasant information, but will probably have considerable influence on the future relations of the Indians to the nation. Secretary Proctor, it will be remembered, has already accepted the United States senatorship tendered him by the governor of Vermont, and will soon retire from his present office. He has good reason to be glad to leave his department in such good condition and with such a record of accomplishment.

LOW LICENSE IN COLORADO SPRINGS.

At the meeting of the city council held last Monday evening, a petition was received, signed by seven of the drug stores of this city, asking that a reduction should be made of their license fee from $500 to $100 for the last half of the current year. After some discussion of the matter, a vote was taken by which the rebate of $200 was made, making the rate for the six months $300, or for the entire year $600. We believe that the subject is of sufficient importance to justify earnest thought on the part of the aldermen and of the citizens generally.

Colorado Springs has always been a temperance town and a prohibition town. The sentiment of the community is still very strongly against the trade in alcoholic liquors. Only the smallest minority could be found in favor of establishing saloons here, or of allowing the open defiance in alcoholism which is the support of the saloons and the disgrace of the people of many other cities. But if any change does come in public sentiment, it will come gradually. The position which has been held by this city in past times is a difficult one and if it is to be maintained, it must be maintained with watchfulness. Already we do not occupy the same position upon this subject that we held in the early days of the city's history.

The present ordinance is a peculiar one, as follows:

Whoever, by himself or another, either as principal, clerk, agent, or servant, shall sell or dispose of, or shall give away for the purpose of avoiding any provisions of this ordinance, any intoxicating, spirituous, malt, vinous, fermented or mixed liquors within the corporate limits of this city, or within one mile of the outer boundaries thereof, shall be deemed guilty of an offense, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than $100 nor more than $500 for each offense: provided, that any regular druggist holding a license from the city council as hereinafter provided for, may sell any of such liquors, only for the purposes, in the quantities and in the manner provided for in section 2 of this ordinance.

Sec. 2. The city council of said city may on application in writing, stating street and number of place of business, accompanied by a petition signed by twenty-five resident freeholders, five of whom shall be owners of property in the block in which the store is situated, grant a license to any regular druggist to sell said liquors in packages, in quantities of not less than one quart each, for medicinal, mechanical, and chemical purposes only, on any day of the week except Sunday; provided, said druggist may sell in less quantities than one quart for medicinal purposes only, on any day of the week, on a prescription from a regular practising physician, the prescription only being good for one day only; and said license shall not be issued for a greater period than twelve months nor for a less period than six months from the date of issue nor until the whole of the license fee due therefrom and hereafter provided for has been paid into the city treasury of the city: provided also that the city council shall revoke such license whenever the holder thereof shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance, or whenever in the judgment of the council the public welfare shall require. Said license shall not apply to the sale of any of the said liquors to persons named in sections 6 and 7 of this ordinance.

Section 3 provides for a bond in the sum of $2,000, signed by the licensee and two approved sureties.

Sec. 4. Every druggist taking out a license under section 2 of this ordinance shall, before such license is issued, pay into the treasury of the city a license fee of $1,000 per annum for the privilege of selling spirituous, vinous and malt liquors in quantities and in the manner prescribed by section 2 of this ordinance, and in quantities less than one gallon.

Section 5 concerns the transfer of licenses.

Section 6 prohibits the selling of liquor to minors, etc., prohibits the drinking of liquors on the premises where sold, and the opening of package on such premises.

Section 7 provides that the mayor may notify a druggist in writing not to sell liquor to certain individuals.

Section 8 prohibits drinking on streets, alleys, vacant lots or grounds, public or open stairway or hall or in any public place in the city.

Section 9 regulates the issuing of physician's prescriptions.

This ordinance, adopted in 1887, is certainly at variance with the original plans of the Fountain colony and with the ordinance of 1873 which prohibited all sales except for medicinal, mechanical or sacramental purposes. But it was felt that it was better to have an ordinance that could be enforced rather than one which though more general in its terms was subject to constant violations for which it was almost impossible to secure convictions. The experience of nearly four years has in many ways justified the passage of a law which at that time was thought to be most liberal and fair to the druggists.

But now, it is said, the times have changed and they are no longer able to pay this amount, or anything more than the minimum fixed by the state law. It must be so, for have not they all signed a paper to that effect? It is true that they have neglected to show the necessity and value of their business to the community, nor did they allege that if the fee was not reduced they would be forced to give up that department of their business, nor did they offer any proof that the reduction in the license would result in a fresh demand for another set of liquor greater privileges. It is not even to escape the dilemma either the liquor department of the drug business is profitable, the $1,000 being paid, or it is not. If it is profitable, why do they not pay the fee? If it is not why do they not stop selling liquor?

But it is not to our purpose to go further into this, nor to discuss how far the requirements of the present law have been observed. Nor is it the intention of this article to proclaim any crusade against the liquor traffic, nor to urge immediate prohibition by means of a very high license. We merely wish to call public attention to the fact that it is easier to drift toward laxity in this matter than towards strictness. The license fee in Colorado Springs was not intended as a means of raising revenue, but as a restriction on the liquor traffic. The removal of a part of the license is a removal of a part of the restriction.

The liquor question will always be an active one. Whatever the situation, there will always be those who are satisfied, those who want the sale of liquor made more easy and those who want it made more difficult and scanty. Every year the line must be drawn somewhere. Every year it becomes necessary for the people of Colorado Springs to decide how much of their prohibitory system shall be maintained, how much of it shall be given up.

THE SUNDAY GAZETTE.

The especial feature of to-morrow's GAZETTE will be a story by Bret Harte, entitled "Johnson's Old Woman." The short stories recently printed in the GAZETTE have been by authors of the highest reputation. It is our firm intention to fully maintain the past high standing in this important feature of a Sunday paper. Arrangements are now made for a new series of short stories by the best authors, which will be printed during the present winter.

Robert Louis Stevenson writes of his farewell to the island of Apemama and the king Tembinok.

The European correspondence includes articles on Lord Tennyson, Sir Henry Ponsonby, private secretary to the queen, and the great house in Hamburg which the headquarters for the trade of the world in wild animals.

Bill Nye writes of his ramblings through Ohio and Pennsylvania and Howard Fielding tells of the college student who was too busy with his studies to go home to Thanksgiving but found time to attend and play in the football game.

Julian Hawthorne has interviewed the president for the Benefit of GAZETTE readers and hopes that the story will prevent some of the numerous calls which make life a burden to the chief magistrate.

Alice MacGowan has an article on Wellesley college illustrated by two opposite portraits of faculty and students.

Miss Lolia Vail contributes the third of the kindergarten articles, the subject this week being, "The Second Gift."

The two full reports of the Associated and United Press will give the most accurate and complete accounts of the happenings throughout the world, while current topics of foreign interest will receive due attention in the cable letters.

We invite a careful comparison of the Sunday GAZETTE with any Sunday paper published anywhere. Great care is exercised both in regard to what goes in and what is left out, and we believe that the result is a paper more interesting, more valuable and more acceptable to Colorado Springs people than any other can be.

LITERARY NOTES.

In the December Forum, Sir Edwin Arnold will have a description of a "Day with Lord Tennyson," describing the home life of the laureate, with many incidental criticisms of his works. In the same number Frederic Harrison will have a paper to show why the whole system of modern education is built on a wrong basis.

The financial and international bearings of the Jewish persecution will be explained in the December Forum by M. Leroy-Beaulieu, the greatest living authority on the subject. In the same number, M. Camille Pelletan a member of the French chamber of deputies, frankly explains the French feeling towards Germany, showing that at some time another conflict about Alsace-Lorraine is inevitable.

Mr. Charles H. Browning, of Ardmore Pa., will bring out this month a second edition of his "Americans of Royal Descent." It is a pleasure to observe from Mr Browning's circular that the Smith family is one of royal lineage, the families of Browne and Jones likewise occupy this cheerful position of eminence.

Although it is now nearly sixty years since Charles Lamb died, the little cottage in which he and his sister resided at Islington shows but slight evidence of external change. Situated in a narrow lane, [illegible] way strewn with [illegible] for the [illegible] road and set back [illegible] from the thoroughfare and small [illegible] the impression of [illegible] seclusion. A room [illegible] of which hang clusters of roses [illegible] the gateway and gives a [illegible] appearance imparted [illegible] by the attendant [illegible] to the street [illegible] which is still known as Lamb's Cottage.—Pall Mall Budget.

Mr. Frank Stockton has given an interviewer some information about Polly of Lodder Grange. That young woman, says Mr Stockton rightly, pronounces "long grass," was "real," it seems, "just as real as the boat and the family who dwelt there." After she left the domestic service of the Stocktons she betook herself to the stage for which she had a vague feeling that she was now, you may read her stage name in letters of fifteen on a hundred posters. Two years during the season. Remember I say you may do so. Further than that I do not give you any clue." In the course of the interview it also transpired that Mr Stockton now invariably dictates his work "to my stenographer," he says, "must be without a trace of nervousness for I will want to hear for the right word."

RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes and Comments by the Rev. Jas. H. Greggs.

A Hebrew prophet would have seen in the awful famine now impending over Russia the judgment of a righteous God upon the iniquities of the nation and of its rulers. The characteristic of the Hebrew mind was that it skipped several causes and arrested all events straight back to the first cause, from whom all secondary causes and their results proceed. The tyranny of the czars and the nobility, the ignorance and superstition and drunkenness in which the people have been allowed to remain are the proximate causes of the present tribulation, but ultimately it is because the laws of God have been set aside, laws intellectual, laws economical, laws sanitary and laws social have been flagrantly transgressed and that these awful stress have come to pass.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly but they grind exceeding small."

These remarks are suggested by the following clipping:

A correspondent of the New York Tribune presents a vivid picture of the terrible experience through which the Russian people are now passing. Government other reports after a careful examination, that more than thirty two millions of people in European Russia are in danger of absolute starvation. It is impossible to realize the full meaning of this statement, but one gets some impression of the hardship and misery involved when one realizes that a similar condition here would mean the destitution of one half the people of the United States. Probably no such universal misery has been recorded in modern history. There have been famines in India and China and in other parts of the world, but no famine of such a magnitude and none in a country which, like Russia, claims to be civilized. The correspondent who draws this gloomy picture attributes the state of affairs to two things, ignorance and fatalism. The relation supposed of popular intelligence is bearing its fruit in the entire ignorance of natural laws and of all intelligent agricultural methods, while, on the other hand fatalism saps energy and paralyzes effort. Whatever happens, though it be the direct result of their own carelessness, the universal exclamation among Russian peasants is, "It is the will of God!" Villages are periodically consumed because they are made of wood and the houses are so connected that to ignite one is to fire the whole community, but the peasants never think of changing their method of construction. "It is the will of God," they say, and go on perpetuating the old condition of things. In the face of such horrors as Russia is now undergoing, it seems almost an impertinence to moralize. It is the government rather than the people that is responsible, and very naturally, and with entire justice, the people took to the government for help in this hour of their need.

***

The Independent counts up about $6,000,000 spent last year by the different denominations for home missions in this country. Add to this what has been raised on the ground in mission fields and the amount will show that Christian patriotism is by no means declining.

***

Who would have believed in 1870 that within a quarter of a century the Bible would have had a larger sale in Italy than any other book? Yet that was the fact last year, and it was sold with illustrations in half penny parts. Is there not in this fact a suggestion for mission fields?

***

New York city has one liquor saloon for every 125 inhabitants. Leaving out of account young children and those who do not drink liquor, it must follow that it takes not more than seventy-five persons to support a saloon in that city. No other single fact goes so far to explain the strength of Tammany and its grip on that ill governed metropolis.

***

Bishop Vowler Short of St. Asaph was very fond of school inspection, as all who remember him know. He tried one day to explain the meaning of "besetting sin." When he thought he had succeeded he went on: "Now, you see that I am a bishop, living in a fine house, with horses and carriages and many servants. What do you suppose my besetting sin likely to be?" A little girl, who had but imperfectly understood his explanation, promptly replied, "Drunkenness, please, sir." "No, my dear, no; I humbly think not," said the bishop, gravely, while everyone else was convulsed with laughter.

The Christian Union has one of the best deliverances on the question of opening the Columbian exposition at Chicago on Sunday that we have seen. It is as follows:

The directors of the Columbian exposition will make a great mistake if they suppose that only the Sabbatarians demand the closing of the expositions on Sunday, or that the demand rest on Puritan grounds. It comes from a very much larger constituency, and is urged by very different considerations. Sunday has become the nation's rest day. That the nation derived this gift from the Hebrew people, that the Hebrews believe that they received it directly from God, and that the Puritans entertain the same opinion, does not lessen the value of the gift for others who hold a different opinion. Never did any age more need this weekly rest day than the American people. Those who have not possessed it are beginning to clamor for it, not on religious but on social and sanitary grounds. Louisiana has for the first time in her history put a Sunday law upon her statute book. The German Socialists are beginning to demand it, not as a day consecrated to worship but as a day reserved for rest. A like demand is heard in all ranks even in France. Here is a ground on which the religious and unreligious can and do meet. The words per se are that law should preserve the quiet of the day in order that worship may not be disturbed, the secularist wishes law to preserve the quiet of the day that he may not be deprived of his rest day by an employer or by a competition equally compulsory. Closing the Columbian Exposition on Sunday will be a national recognition of the double demand. Opening it on Sunday will be as distinct a repudiation of this demand.

Nor will it be enough to stop the machinery, which will be almost a physical necessity. If the exposition is otherwise open, an army of exhibitors and custodians must be present. Their rest day will be denied them. And the exposition will say, more distinctly and emphatically than any resolution of congress could say, this nation does not recognize Sunday as a national rest-day. It sees in it only the religious fete day of a sect.

Nor is the opening of the exposition on Sunday necessary to enable working men to visit it. The same end can easily be secured by an act of the Illinois legislature establishing a Saturday half holiday during the period of the Columbian Exposition. One policy will take for the exposition time now concentrated to rest the other, time now expended in toil. Few candid Americans will doubt that the nation can better afford to lessen its toil than to lose its rest.

We, however, agree with the New York Sun that if it closed it should be closed absolutely. It ought not to be closed to the public and opened to the few. Let us have no favoritism. Sunday passes should be unknown, and no admittance should be granted except to those caretakers whose presence may be indispensable.

The Christian Union is not a Sabbatarian journal. It does not believe in the Puritan idea of Sunday, does not think it Scriptural, nor for the advantage of the people, does not regard the fourth commandment as of binding force on the Christian church or the American people, believes in the Christian Sunday, not in the Puritan Sabbath, has no wish to enforce its own ideas of Sunday on others by law, and would resent the attempt of others to enforce their ideas of Sunday by law. It represents not a Puritan constituency, not a Sabbatarian constituency, but, we believe, a much larger one, in urging on grounds of public welfare that the Columbian Exposition regard the day which by common consent this nation has devoted to rest and to opportunity for religious worship and unselfish work.

WAR DEPT U. S. A.

SECRETARY PROCTOR'S ANNUAL REPORT OF PROGRESS.

Much has been Accomplished for Coast Defense — A Successful Experiment with the Indians—Power Descriptions and More — His Guns — A Farewell Row.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—The annual report of the department of war was made public today. Its essential features are as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON, Nov. 1, 1891.

GENERAL PRESIDENT:—In submitting to you the report, it seems proper, as a preliminary to such comment as they may require to be made upon the new legislative and administrative measures affecting the department which have been inaugurated during your administration.

The line of coast defense sites for forts and batteries have been procured and engineer work has been begun on fifteen forts, besides and emplacements for guns, at New York, Boston, San Francisco, Hampton Roads, and Washington. The north wing and center section of the gun factory at Watervliet has been completed and is nearly equipped. A south wing, doubling the capacity, is now being constructed. Provision has already been made for the manufacture by the government of ninety-eight breech-loading steel rifled guns of high power and contracts have been contracted for with private manufacturers. A supply of submarine mines with seventy-three 12-inch mortars are also under construction.

For the improvement of the enlisted force new methods of recruiting have been adopted. It is carried on more in small towns and rural communities and the recruits are better in consequence and their antecedents carefully inquired into. The ration has been increased by the addition of one pound of vegetables daily. Soldiers are now entitled to a discharge at the end of three years of faithful service, and are permitted to purchase their discharge at any time after one year. Summary courts have been established for the speedy trial of petty offenses. If the man desire it, competent officers are assigned to defend them before courts martial. Punishments under the articles of war in time of peace have been defined and limited. Sunday inspection and target practice have been abolished, schools and gymnasia established. These, together with the specific measures undertaken for such purposes, have reduced the percentage of desertions to a lower point than ever before in the history of the army, and in the last year have reduced the number of inmates in military prisons over 20 per cent.

A system of examination of officers for promotion has been established, and their promotion, with the exception of one grade, has been put upon a lineal basis throughout the army. The retired list has been relieved by appropriate legislation. An efficiency record of officers has been kept, enabling their selection for special duty to be made on that basis.

In pursuance of a policy of concentrating the troops in larger posts, about one-fourth of the number of posts occupied in 1889 have been abandoned, and the reservations turned over to the interior department. The employment of contract surgeons, in addition to the regular medical corps, has been largely dispensed with. The licenses of post traders have been revoked. The treatment of Indians has been successfully undertaken. The detail of officers to colleges has been increased and new rules adopted. The rebellion records have been published much more rapidly under increased appropriations and a reorganization of the work. The military and hospital records of the late war have been brought to date in the record and pension division, the settlement of pension claims has been expedited, and the preservation of these valuable records for effective use is well toward completion. When finished six hundred clerks can be discharged or transferred to other departments.

COAST DEFENSE.

The problem of adequate coast defense has practically been settled. Fortunately it has not been a question of party politics. There has been much discussion and some difference of individual opinion in respect to the rapidity with which the work should be executed and as regards details. It has been generally recognized, however, in congress and by the public press as a national concern a thoroughly American policy. Nor is it a new departure. The report of Mr. Endicott board, under the act of congress of March 3, 1885, states that in 1800 "coast defenses were not surpassed by those of any country for efficiency either for offence or defense, and were entirely competent to resist the assaults of war of that period." But after the close of the war there was a most rapid development in the means of offensive warfare, while the fortifications which we had were not kept up, and much of it was new work undertaken. Our coast was in 1890 almost all past and in fact were defenseless.

In 1885 congress provided for a joint board of army and navy officers to examine and report what method should be adopted for the manufacture of heavy ordnance for the use of the army and navy, and the cost of buildings, tools, and implements therefor. This board, after visiting the chief establishments of Europe and the principal steel manufactories of this country, submitted a report in 1884 which recommended the establishment of two gun factories, one for the army at Watervliet arsenal, West Troy, N. Y., and another for the navy in this city, and that our steel manufacturers should be encouraged by suitable legislation to incur the large expense of erecting the plant necessary for producing such gun metal as is required.

In 1886 congress provided that a board, composed of army and navy officers and civilians, of which the secretary of war should be a member and president, should examine and report at what ports fortifications or other defenses were most urgently required, and the character and kind of defense best adapted for each with reference to armament and the utilization of torpedoes, mines, or other defensive appliances. This board submitted a systematic and elaborate scheme for the defense of the sea coast at the most principal ports, and, with less detail, provisions for the defense of the lake frontier. Simultaneously with the investigations of this board the two houses of congress independently considered the subject, the senate by a select committee on ordnance and war ships, of which General Hawley is chairman, and the house, by a committee on ordnance and gunnery, of which Randall was chairman. The reports of these committees, made in 1886, are replete with valuable information. The conclusions reached by these various boards, so different in composition and so well qualified to consider the subject from every point of view, are unanimous, and their several reports contain all the details needful for an intelligent consideration of the subject. They afforded the basis of legislation and resolutions of congress which have indicated our present definite policy in respect to coast defenses.

It is necessarily contemplated as a national defense as its most important one. We have some 4,000 miles of coast, size of Atlantic. No great power has more than a few hundred miles of coast to defend, and yet even they have harbors with heavy fortifications and high power guns. The cost of land attack has not increased as rapidly as the means of attacking them. They are still the cheapest to build, but once built the cost of maintaining them can be brought to the minimum. Neither are they permanent nor can they become useless. They may be built with a view to further strengthening if required, and capable of mounting larger guns if necessary.

Appropriations of $200,000 each for the purchase of sites for fortification and sea coast defense were made by the last congress, and plans have been made under these appropriations for sites for gun and mortar batteries at Glover's Cliff in Boston harbor, Point Comfort, Fort Wadsworth, Plumb Island and Sandy Point in New York harbor, Lagunas Merced in San Francisco harbor, and Shooter's Island in the Potomac. Proceedings of condemnation have been commenced to obtain other sites near Fort Wadsworth and Fort Hamilton in New York harbor, Willoughby Spit in Hampton Roads and Point Lobos in San Francisco harbor. Over one-half of the entire appropriation has been allotted and about $[illegible] expended. Other payments are to be made as soon as the examination of titles by the department of justice is completed. The balance of the appropriation will probably be expended during the next five months, but will not be sufficient to pay the awards of juries in cases now pending. I recommend that an appropriation of $[illegible] be continued annually until the important sites are secured. It will require this amount for several years to pay for sites as rapidly as they will be needed for use, and it is economy to acquire them as quickly as possible after the action has been determined upon.

At its last session congress made an appropriation for the addition of the south wing to the new gun factory at Watervliet, and after the substantial completion of that place, except that space has been left to add machinery for finishing guns if their manufacture should be deemed advisable. The work of construction is now well advanced and the machinery under contract.

Certain provisions in the last two fortification acts were designed to induce private manufacturers in this country to cooperate with the government in fabricating guns, as well as in supplying the steel forgings. Advantageous bids were received and a contract made with the Bethlehem company for supplying twenty-five 8-inch, fifty 10-inch and twenty-five 12-inch guns.

This contract, and the output of the gun factory from the forgings already under contract, provide for the manufacture of the breech-loading steel rifle guns of high power, sixty-two of 8-inch caliber, eighty-six of 10-inch, and fifty of 12-inch. Four have been finished, two 8-inch, one 10-inch, and one 12-inch, twenty-four more will be finished in 1892, thirty-four in 1893, forty in 1894 when the machinery at the gun factory will be nearly complete. Thereafter there can be manufactured about forty-five per year and the deliveries from the Bethlehem one hundred-gun contract will be eight to fourteen yearly, according to the proportion of small or large caliber. Besides the 100, for which provisions have already been made, if forgings are supplied by the gun factory 200 more guns can be turned out within the next ten years, and mostly of 10- and 12-inch caliber. I believe these figures to be conservative, and that the actual results will be greater, for with the experience in the manufacture the work should progress more rapidly.

Two batteries, each for sixteen 12-inch mortars, and emplacements for two 12-inch, two 10-inch, and four 8-inch guns are now in process of construction for the defense of New York; also one battery for sixteen 12-inch mortars, and emplacements for one 10-inch gun, with two more in preparation at Boston; and emplacements for two 10-inch guns, with one 10-inch and three 12-inch in preparation at San Francisco; for two 10-inch guns at Hampton Roads, and for two 10-inch guns at Washington. Progress has also been made in providing a suitable supply of submarine mines. A considerable number are on hand or under contract for the defense of New York, San Francisco, Boston, Hampton Roads, Philadelphia, Washington, and Charleston, and some of the mining easements for operating them are completed or under contract at those ports and at Portland, Me. Contracts have also been made for the early delivery of seventy-three 12-inch cast-iron rifled mortars, hooped with steel, of a pattern known to be serviceable, though probably not equal to an all-steel construction now under test.

The department has been obliged, on account of the financial embarrassment of the contractors, to extend the time until January, April and July, 1892, for the delivery of the ten guns contracted for with the Pneumatic Dynamite Gun company for Sandy Hook, Fort Schuyler, Fort Warren and San Francisco, one of these guns was 10-inch, and nine of them 15-inch caliber. I move of the latter are, by law, to be mounted on the Pacific coast. The chief of the bureau of ordnance states that—

Reports furnished the department of trials made of a 15-inch pneumatic dynamite gun manufactured in this country for the English government are quite favorable to the performance of the gun and its projectile.

The point has now been reached when, by the continuance of the present rate of appropriations for coast defenses, which have been moderate, the work can be carried on systematically and judiciously. To stop or check the work now would be to lose much that has been done; to continue will be both safety and economy. Each year some part of it can be completed so as to become available, and thereafter every gun mounted will add to its efficiency.

The board of ordnance and fortification in their report say:

Four years' continuance of similar legislation and activity and it can no longer be said that the United States is defenseless against foreign powers.

PIPE AND SIEGE ARTILLERY.

Good progress has been made in the production of improved rifle steel ordnance. One hundred 3.2-inch steel field guns have been completed and twenty-five more are under manufacture. A type 3.6-inch heavy steel field gun has been completed and proved by a test to be satisfactory. The manufacture of twenty-four others and carriages for them will soon be commenced. The type 3.6-inch steel field mortar in this class has tested last year. Sixteen of these pieces are now in process of manufacture and will be completed with cast-steel carriages within the coming year. The type 5-inch breech-loading steel rifle for siege service is completed and has stood a satisfactory test. The manufacture of ten more has been commenced and should be completed during the ensuing year. The type 7-inch breech-loading steel howitzer for siege service has been completed and tested, and ten more will be finished during 1892.

MAGAZINE SMALL ARMS.

During the year a board has been appointed, consisting of officers from the ordnance, cavalry, and infantry, to consider, test, and report upon magazine small-arms. They have examined those in use in the principal European armies, but a satisfactory smokeless powder is an essential element for consideration in fixing upon the reduced caliber. Their reports of similar trials made abroad indicate that magazine arms are still so far from perfection that it is not wise to change from our present single loader to a magazine system in too great haste.

DESERTION.

Desertions from the army for the year ending September 30th have been less than in any other year in the history of the army.

The report then deals with the subjects of recruits, promotion from the ranks, courts martial, the "three battalion" system of organization, the artillery, the pay corps.

ENLISTMENT OF INDIANS.

Regarding this interesting subject the report says: In March last a general order was issued authorizing the enlistment of one company of Indians for each of the twenty-six regiments of white cavalry and infantry serving west of the Mississippi river. This action was taken after careful inquiry into the conduct in the past of Indian scouts and police employed in a military or quasi military capacity.

The primary object, fully justifying the experiment, in my judgment, was to give employment, in useful and legitimate channels, to a considerable number of Indians of the warlike tribes. Having been deprived, by the extinction of game, of both employment and means of subsistence, they can not be changed at once from nomads to quiet and successful farmers. Incidentally it was hoped that the habits of obedience, cleanliness, and punctuality, as well as of steady labor in the performance of both military and industrial work inculcated by service in the army, would have a good effect on those who might enlist, and also furnish an object lesson of some value and exert a healthy influence upon others of their tribes.

It was not de[illegible] to urge in special efforts of the re[illegible] and the day [illegible] them as sol[illegible] very satisfac[illegible] troop of cavalry [illegible] recruited to [illegible] others par[illegible] that the er[illegible] In [illegible] tunity to [illegible] personally [illegible] any trouble [illegible] showing the [illegible] could be [illegible] In good [illegible] clothing [illegible] cloth [illegible] kitchens [illegible] of other [illegible]

The conduct of the Indians recognizes that the men of this tribe possess enough good of the character [illegible] and he is essential in light cavalry and considers the [illegible] acquisition to [illegible] Satisfactory reports have also [illegible] of the progress of the Indian [illegible]

Nothing unfavorable has been brought to the attention of the department regarding the utility as military organizations of the Indian companies of other arms, but so far there is every reason to believe that much more than was expected of the experiment will be realized. They are treated in all respects like other soldiers, and the same duties [illegible] Dressed [illegible] the same food, taught to cook and eat their food in the same manner, and in every respect the strivers entirely to equal, and if possible to outdo their white comrades. All commands are given in English, and though few of them understand the language they learn the sound of their orders quickly and make rapid progress in drill.

Some of the companies, which have only been enlisted for three or four months, would make a creditable appearance at any encampment or review. When it is considered that a short time ago many of these Indians were "blanket Indians," that few of them ever had on a suit of clothes, slept under a roof, ate at a table, used a knife and fork, wore shoes, or had their hair cut, the transformation is indeed remarkable.

The habit for a few years of wearing good clothes, eating good food well cooked by themselves, and living in clean and comfortable quarters, and the lesson that these comforts are earned by their own good conduct, will not be entirely lost upon men of any race or color. They are receiving instructions in English and in the methods of civilized life that will help them to help themselves when discharged. They will be impressed with the power of the government and the folly and futility of disobedience of its authority.

I am confident that after a few months' training they will be fit for any service, and, properly managed, will furnish a valuable addition to the military strength of the nation. Great care must be taken in the selection of officers to whom is intrusted the instruction and development of these companies. Only officers of high character, who believe in the work and in the possibility of progress and civilization for the Indian, who are patient and faithful, and not only soldiers of the highest order, but imbued with something of the missionary spirit as well, should be selected.

It is not only an important step toward their civilization, self-support, and control, but is the cheapest and best insurance against further Indian troubles. While I believe they will prove trustworthy in any service, even against their own people, they will, at least, be sure to insure to some measure for their respective tribes.

OTHER SUBJECTS.

Other subjects to which especial attention is given are: The abandonment of small posts, contract surgeons, post traders, the recently created record and pension division, the military records of the Revolution, the Rebellion records, examinations for promotion, lineal promotion, efficiency records, civilian appointments, the apprentice battalion, militia, national cemeteries, the Chickamauga and Chattanooga national park, national homes for disabled volunteer soldiers.

CONCLUSION.

I would refer you to the report of the major-general commanding the army for further information concerning the condition of the army, and for its operations during the year; to the reports of the several bureaus and divisions of the department for fuller details of its administration, and to the reports of the board of visitors and of the superintendent concerning the military academy. They all contain valuable suggestions, fully and clearly presented.

I have not attempted to make any recapitulation of or merely formal reference to them. It has seemed better that I should simply discuss those matters with respect to which some particular duty is charged upon me, or which seemed to be of the most general interest to the army or the department as a whole. I would call your special attention to the full account, in the report of General Schofield, of the operations of the army last year in relieving the troubles with the Sioux Indians. This campaign, which was made in midwinter in a severe climate, was conducted in a manner deserving commendation.

The character and attainments of the older officers of the army, who made their records during the great war, are now well understood, to require any mention, but I wish to pay a well deserved tribute to the younger officers who have not had the great war opportunities of their seniors. Nothing in my connection with the army has surprised and gratified me so much as the general high character and professional attainments of the younger officers of the army, who have made the most of their opportunities under the conditions of comparatively peace. It is upon them that we must depend in the future, and they can be implicitly relied upon to be equal to the requirements of any emergency.

As I am about to retire from this department, I desire to acknowledge the earnest and loyal cooperation which I have at all times received in its administration from all of the officers and officials, and the same agreement and support which I have received from you.

Secretary of War.

Daughters of Rebekah Entertain

The entertainment given by Monte Rosa lodge, Daughters of Rebekah, last evening was attended by an audience which nearly filled Odd Fellows hall. The literary part of the programme was opened by a little speech of welcome by the noble grand of the lodge, Capt. Seth Baker. He then introduced a quartet consisting of Messrs. Bunstead, Seymour, Smith and Woodworth, who sang well and received a hearty encore to which they responded acceptably.

Miss Lottie Pierson then favored the company with a vocal selection in a fine contralto voice.

Mr. J. M. Bolton was then called on for a speech and he spoke for a few moments upon Rebekah, drug stores, the Goddess of Liberty and kindred topics. He was frequently applauded throughout his remarks.

Miss Lola Horn's fine elocutionary powers were well displayed in her two selections. In the first she personated a "little freckled face girl" who talked somewhat freely with one of her mother's visitors. The second was delivered in response to an encore and was of a pathetic nature. It was excellently rendered.

After another selection, "Good Night Ladies," by the quartet, Captain Baker announced that the oysters, which sent out a savory invitation from the next room, would soon be ready. The chairs were removed to the sides of the room and tables were spread in the middle of the floor. "Rebekah at the Well" supplied the thirsty and a "fish pond" invited those present to hazard their fortune. The Odd Fellows and their wives, actual and prospective, and their sisters and mothers and daughters, know how to enjoy the social opportunities of the lodge rooms and so the rooms were filled with laughter and gaiety all the evening.

"Lost in London," to be presented at the opera house, Tuesday evening, Nov. 24, by Newton Beers and a strong company of fellow players, is an English melodrama, abounding in strong situations throughout. Those of a more humorous disposition will enjoy a comedy element of the highest, sufficient to please the most fastidious. The company carry their own special scenery, thus assuring the audience of pleasing and appropriate mechanical changes. Mr. Beers is an untiring and conscientious actor, fully deserving the past laurels won in the east this season. Seats are now on sale at the regular prices.

The third of the assembly balls given in connection with Mrs. Whitbeck's dancing school occurred last evening at her dancing academy and was an unusually pleasant event. A large party came over from Manitou.

Royal Baking Powder Has no Equal.

The Royal Baking Powder will make sweeter, lighter, finer flavored and more wholesome bread, biscuit and cake than any other leavening agent. It is of higher strength, and therefore goes further in work and is more economical. All government and scientific tests go to show this. Royal Baking Powder as a leavening agent is absolutely without an equal.

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE, CHICAGO.

"As the result of my tests I find the Royal Baking Powder superior to all the others in every respect. It is entirely free from all adulteration and unwholesome impurity, and in baking it gives off a greater volume of leavening gas than any other powder. It is therefore not only the purest but also the strongest powder with which I am acquainted.

"WALTER S. HAINES, M. D.," Prof. of Chemistry.

CHICAGO COLLEGE OF PHARMACY.

"The Royal Baking Powder, which tests the highest in strength, is free from lime, alum, lime phosphates or other adulterations. Its superlative purity, the entire wholesomeness of its ingredients, the scientific manner in which they are combined, together with its much greater strength, make the Royal unquestionably superior to any other baking powder.

A WINTER IN THE SOUTH

A winter in the South with the very mention of it brings up delicious memories for those who have been there. The bright sunny skies, the dry bracing air and the warm sunshine is in decided contrast to the cold bleak North.

The great state of Texas is celebrated as one great broad winter resort in itself, but the following places are, perhaps, particularly popular: Fort Worth, with its mineral baths, healthful climate and good hotels; Austin, the beautiful Capital City; San Antonio, one of the few really historical places in our country; Houston, with its blooming roses, oleanders and groves of oranges and lemons, and Galveston with its delicious sea breezes. These are but a few of the delightful resorts of this highly favored region.

To escape from all the pains and discomforts of our rigorous weather, transported by magic from the region of snow and ice, to the fragrance of this summer land, is now made possible and easy by the Denver, Texas & Ft. Worth Branch of the Union Pacific System, which runs through Pullman Palace Sleepers between Denver, Ft. Worth, Dallas, Shreveport and New Orleans, and offers exceeding low excursion rates to all Southern cities from Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Trinidad. For a full description of Southern winter resorts, reached over the Union Pacific System, or for excursion rates, apply to W. G. Rice, Union Pacific Ticket agent, office 11 Pike's Peak avenue, for a copy of the Union Pacific Winter Tours Folder.

BEAUTIFUL OKLAHOMA

The exciting incidents of the two great invasions of Oklahoma territory by home seekers April 22, 1889 and September 22nd, 1891, have given that section deserved prominence as a place in which to cheaply obtain one of Uncle Sam's farms. The lands recently opened are located in the Old Iowa, Sac and Fox and Potawattomie reservations lying directly east of Guthrie and Oklahoma City, on the C. T. & S. F. R. R. They now constitute counties "A" and "B" with Chandler and Tecumseh as respective county seats—both large and rapidly growing towns. Claims can be bought at reasonable figures. For the raising of corn, cotton, wheat and fruit Oklahoma is unexcelled.

DR MACARTHUR'S OPINION

The Famous Baptist Divine Tells of His Western Trip

When Dr MacArthur of New York was a visitor here he was greatly pleased with all he saw and heard and those who were familiar with him became convinced that he would not be silent regarding our city and its climate when he returned home This is proving true for The Standard, the leading Baptist paper of the west in its issue of the 19th, contains a letter from Dr MacArthur that is full of interest, as it concerns our state and city. The introduction and the portion relating to Colorado Springs are as follows

"As far as the east is from the west so said the Psalmist, speaking of the removal of our transgressions. How far is this? Who can tell? East and west are relative terms. What was once the far west is now to the farther west far east. To New Yorkers Colorado is the west, but to the people of that state there is a farther west. But the trip even to Colorado enlarges one's conception of that empire of which Chicago is the natural goal and capital Such a trip gives one an realized idea, not alone of the possibilities of the state of Colorado but of Chicago and other cities standing between the great east and the greater west. It is difficult for one while gliding over these vast plains in a sleeping car, with all the appointments of modern improvement in travel, to realize that he is pursuing the painful track where wagons once were wearily drawn by horses and oxen, and where [illegible] from want, and exposure. The dreams of prophets are more than realized in the building of great and beautiful cities on these once barren plains. The transformation from the thorn to the fig tree, and from the brier to the myrtle tree, is more than surpassed by the transformation of barren plains into fruitful fields or prosperous cities. It is not possible to use language which shall too strongly emphasize the greatness of the changes attained and the brightness of the prospects now opening in these western cities and still untrodden plains. In these plains there are millions of arid acres which shall yet be redeemed and changed into flourishing fields and beautiful homes. There is here an area broader and richer than the great eastern states whose children have gone forth to transform and to ennoble the greater west Colorado must occupy a high place among the most progressive states of this Western empire * * * * *

COLORADO SEASONS.

It is difficult to know what to omit when one comes to speak of this charming city under the shadow of the glorious Rocky mountains. It is the home of men and women of unusual intellectual culture and social refinement. It is one of the most [illegible] those seeking or those enjoying health. It is a vast basin among the glorious hills, filled with golden sunshine One has to restrain himself when he comes to speak of a place so delightful in itself, and filled with such men and women as one meets in Colorado Springs. Here there is a happy union of business enterprise and of varied culture. Here are homes which are the rivals of the beautiful dwellings on the banks of old historic Hudson, here are public schools surpassed but by few in eastern cities, and here are churches that would be an honor architecturally to any city, and which in their religious activity merit the praise of our best churches in the east The courtesy received from the board of trade through its excellent representative, Mr Buckman was so much appreciated on our part as it was generous and considerate on their part

The Baptist church in this place was founded by the wife's sister, mate and friend, Rev E. A Taft who did excellent work in laying the foundation although at the time sick and suffering His grave is in this beautiful city among these everlasting hills. A few years ago our noble friend and brother Dr Richard Montague went to Colorado from Providence The present large and churchly house of worship is due his patient toil Every man woman and child is ready to acknowledge his worth as a man and his ability as a minister of Christ He has brought by his gifts of scholarship his [illegible] and his [illegible] the Baptist church into the front rank in the churches of the city Illness drove to this city but he has done more for God and man here than he could have done elsewhere in Providence In the midst of family grief and personal weakness he has toiled on until the happy present has been reached His people have done nobly in associating with him in the work of this [illegible] a man of like spirit Rev F W Hart But of the services in connection with the dedication of the new house [illegible] necessary here [illegible] Hart [illegible] the [illegible] Rev F W [illegible] preacher [illegible] Hart in his [illegible] of the dedication [illegible] Dr Montague [illegible] Dr Brother and his better [illegible] receptions in [illegible] the [illegible] of the institution for the [illegible] of which [illegible] has also approximately spoken The courtesy of the delightful people of Colorado Springs is even brighter and more [illegible] than the sunlight and beautiful sunshine and other golden attractions We can also heartily commend to all friends east and west the Antlers hotel The Antlers [illegible] every [illegible] to be employed [illegible] attention will be given [illegible] beautiful situation looking out [illegible] Pikes Peak [illegible] eternal snows or other gigantic mountains and over foothills and plains [illegible] the variety of excursions springs the [illegible] den of the Gods Monument Park [illegible] Byron and other places of interest [illegible]
